
Accessories

The accessories that complete the supply, such as the trolleys, automatic loading systems or product trays, are another factor whose importance is often underestimated.

Knowledge of the processes and of their critical aspects of application has allowed Fedegari to provide components and systems which have unique features.

These products, too, are entirely made of stainless materials which are compatible with the pharmaceutical applications for which they are intended. Furthermore, they are designed so as to allow extremely low-cost maintenance.

Special applications require the design of dedicated components, so that the user is not forced to adapt the process with difficulty to the limitations of the containers or of the loading systems that are generally used.

Fedegari offers its Customers all of its experience in designing and, if necessary, manufacturing the needed accessories so that they perfectly adapt to the machines and plants for which they are intended, ensuring that any requirement of integration with existing structures and machines is met.
